President's FY 2017 Budget Request for the U.S. Department of State and USAID – Central America Strategy

Source: <http://www.state.gov/r/pa/prs/ps/2016/02/252213.htm>

“In our own Hemisphere, our budget ensures ongoing implementation of the U.S. Strategy for Engagement in Central America and dedicates over $750.6 million - as part of the . Administration's $1.0 billion request for appropriations and financing assistance to Central America - to a long-term, comprehensive approach designed to address the underlying factors of migration of unaccompanied children and families. These whole-of-government efforts are geared toward promoting economic opportunities for the Central American people; building democratic, accountable, transparent, and effective public institutions; and providing a safer and more secure environment for citizens in the region.”

How this all comes together to make Central American immigration to the US self-perpetuating.

Cumulative causation of migration leads to a situation in which networks are formed creating connections between family, peers and colleagues in origin and destination communities. When these networks reach a critical threshold, migration becomes self-perpetuating because each act of migration creates the social structure needed to sustain it.

"Each act of migration creates social capital among people to whom the migrant is related, thereby raising the odds of their migration."

“Since FY 2008, FCPS’ enrollment has consistently increased, resulting in FCPS being the tenth largest school system in the United States. The increase in the number of FCPS’ students in the eight years is almost the size of Arlington County Public Schools’ total enrollment. While experiencing significant enrollment growth and changes in student demographics, revenues have not kept pace with expenditures.”

This is the first time in seven years a budget has been proposed without cuts.

"I really see it as a crossroad," said Dr. Garza. "Which way are we going to go? Are we going to go the way where we decide after nine consecutive years of cuts that we've got to begin to restore and renew our system? Or are we going to go the path where we have to continue to make the cuts?"

"We've seen thanks to our task force what that could look like and our community has expressed their feelings about this over these last six months pretty clearly that they do not want to continue these cuts."

The conversation leading up to the budget proposal focused on cutting extracurricular activities and sports for students. But now, the focus for protesters and the school's top boss is to get more money from the state and county to save programs and retain good teachers by offering them higher salaries. $40 million is slated in the budget to enhance teacher salaries.

Part of the reason the superintendent was able to propose a budget without cuts is due to slowing growth. Garza said there was no requirement to add additional funding for enrollment and that will save the district about $20 million.

Fairfax County is requesting voters to approve a meal tax of 4% which will support the Fairfax County School Budget. This tax is projected to raised approximately $90 million in revenue.

“Millennials go out to eat more often than Gen X or Baby Boomers, according to the analysts. 53% of the group goes out to eat once a week, compared with 43% for the general population.”
